

RENEWABLE HYDROGEN

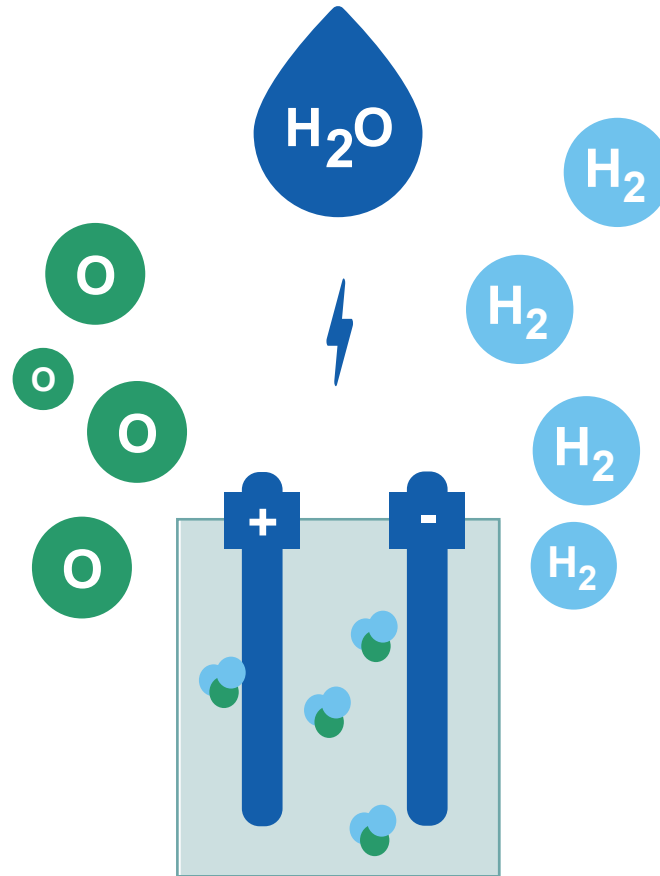

1

During certain times of year, renewable energy generators produce more power than is needed by the market due to low demand.

2

Excess renewable electricity is funneled into electrolyzers that split water into hydrogen and oxygen.

3

Renewable energy is transformed into hydrogen that can be used as a zero-carbon fuel and stored for future use.

